

who has seen the wind?

neither you nor i:

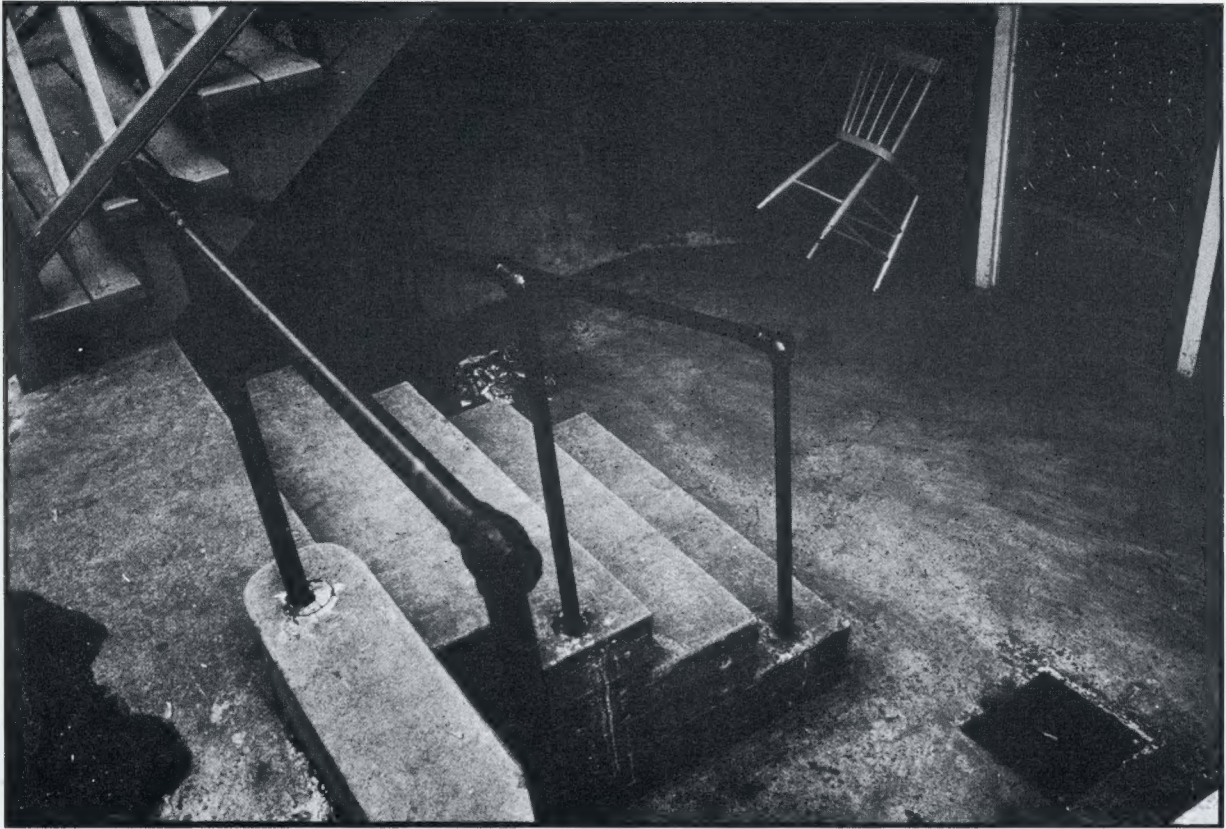

but when the trees bow down their heads, the wind is passing by . . .

louise wheeler you must never do something in order to spare me. i hate kindness. kindness is a horrible voice. just like self-sacrifice it creates so many obligations.

. . . that despairing ironic self-laughter, which comes after we have shed all the tears that we can shed. the laughter that seizes all the world when tragedy becomes comical and ridiculous as it often does.

. . . everything must be fitted with laughter, for laughter alone will show us the enormity of our grief.

go where you will, it does not matter. you can never hurt me, for the world you have left behind with me is always full of you. your absence is more potent than your presence to evoke you in me.

I say that rainbows ringing against blue sky lonely in its clouds that he was wrong

so wrong and if perchance the bells that ring for you do slowly die as on a summer's night in rainbows

remember in endless circles birds will always sing — white bird

heard cursing on a cold black bough:

— i am free only to fly —

ann ricard

the inner reality

in and out

the dancer danced

a merry clock

of swirls

with grace

she made smiles

she bowed and rose

blew a kiss

upon the nose

of me

now i am dancing

of reality

linda allen

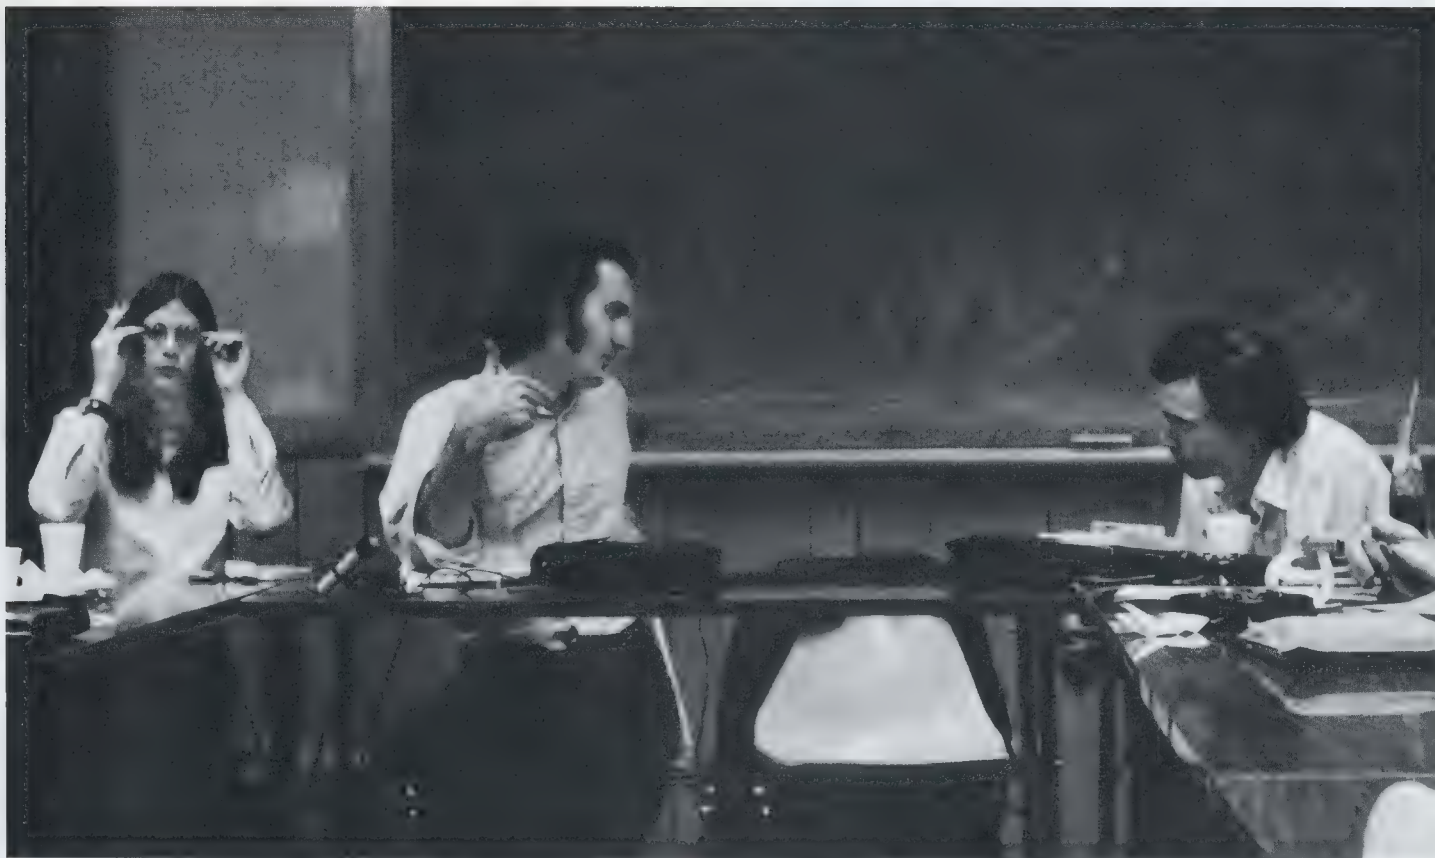

fantasy

you were riding horses in my mind today your hair flopping over your ears. a hot ray of the sun passed over you i saw your heart flickering 'neath your chest then you went away leading your tired horse i felt i'd loved title — prologue to an as yet, incompleted play

THE MARTYR(s)

1st introd — (few lines) the martyrs are murdering one, another

with burning water, with white fire and, unheard words

where there are rain drops on a window of which should one sing — contorted water, or the distorted scene? for every thing seems real: there are different realities but, none is any the less alive in my mind

ann ricard

it is one in my morning of white sunshine i sit, delighted as silence swells to quiet hysteria the arias of sound abound in brilliant metaphor, on metal floors

we come for everyone within our selfless cells possessed by song to the asylum

ann ricard

i saw him standing by the curb near the blackened stump near the ghost of a living tree and i heard him dreaming (with his hands in his pockets) about how soft-white cherry blossoms are just before they fall.

The truth is neither mine nor his nor another's But belongs to us all whom Thou callest to partake of it Warning us terribly not to account it private to ourselves Lest we be deprived of it

AUGUSTINE

Wind shakes the tree; the mountains darken;
But the heart repeats though we would not hearken: Yours is the choice to whom the gods awarded The language of learning and the language of love, Crooked to move as a moneybag or a cancer,
Or straight as a dove.

over undulating grass riding backwards on a jackass watching trees bob up and down on a warm, sunny summer day with grasshoppers walking around ant holes because of the heat.

Breathing in instead of in and out on a mouth organ and tickling the haunches of my mount to make him go better, i thought about God's wife.

the cherished movement

Run into the bog like a small bird to hippos, sit down caring not about damp. Dash through the door ignoring bystanders, let them wait as you hath waited. slap up that seat as you prepare for your landing — pants to ankles, sit down. one buttock seatward duty goes, two buttock down. shake that toilet by the sides, if it trickles kick it sideward by side. don't let soft stains dark ward you off nor white foamed bubbles make you flush premature. if it rattles and chokes or rocks like a battle, plant hands-feet firmly and crouch. be violent but be fair and fight like the best of us with crooked knees and clenched fists; pound thighs if you falter. fear not the bad odour shrink not from wetsplash, let it wet you and baptize your soul. crease teasers grating half a send tight squeezers posturing the end. acrid-acrid burning into eye-bowls that ball around sockets as if limed; wampup bocking into eggish that filths into horrible. sway not! then remove yourself proudly. be big. spray not! — the awful noseful deserves more time. wipe well after seating, goodbye.

like an enraged animal crazed with the grained taste of painted plaster chains i pace constantly caged in this blue confine of mine: (the mind) a cosmos room — the prison place of limitless space
. . . as beast let me embrace walls, assaulting all street dahlia

with television words and poetic intent,

i
ask for your breast.

in daylight you are she
of chaos;
but in the shadow

dwell.

am ophion.

we speak of the egyptian isis, of flowered melodies and strange guitar whims, of how you are the key to the universe, and of the jewish poet who spoke of you.

with exhausted nipples and your spiritual strip:
remain your private comedy.

you call me poet
and yet, where is the spherical epiphany?

the orphan dictates from his pencil stand: it lies in the smoke of our cigarettes,
in your milk,
on the table.

If you're at the crossroads in your education and career planning, you may want to consider continuing your learning in a business environment. The graphics in general, and printing in particular, offer plenty of challenge and opportunity . . . including sales and management training programs . . . plus a broad exposure to many different types of other businesses through their marketing/printing/advertising activities.

If you would like to discuss it further, drop us a line with a brief personal background.

THIS IS REVIEW 71
